Major Patrick Grant is a medical support officer. He joined the military at the age of 18. After completing basic training and specialist training he served as a health technician. After six years in the ranks, he was commissioned. His initial assignment as an officer was with an Army Field Hospital. In 2001 he started his operational tour in the Gulf. Working with Air Mobile Ambulance he provided second-line medical support. In his career he also had a chance to work for the United Nations as a Military Observer. He spent six months in Western Sahara. In this mission he was part of a small recce team gathering intelligence. Major Grant is currently preparing for his next posting. He is attending a three-month Army management course.

This is the end of the text. Reading 2 follows.
